DISCUSSION ITEMS:

Question	Person(s) Responsible	Notes and Next Steps
How will the college approach the development of it's upcoming Institutional Self-Evaluation Report (ISER)? [Attachment].	Thomas Greene	March 17: districtwide accreditation experience March 18: Gohar will be visiting ARC - decided to use our governance process which brings a group of individuals together to process deliverables such as the ISER - mentality change by ACCJC and process changes - ISER will be read and reviewed by entire team of peers - any deficiencies, recommendations for meeting standard, or recommendations for improving will be identified - visiting team will be a subset of the team with very focused areas - recommendation for ISER Project Team sponsored by ELT - lead/co-lead – Adam Karp/Bill Simpson - draft charter to come forward to ELT
		- appreciation to project team leadership, team members and Cheri Jones

What are the key recommendations of the Educational Master Plan Project Team as outlined in the draft EMP report? How will this plan, once adopted, be utilized by the college? FIRST READING [Attachment]	Project Team Leads	- academic senate, student senate, SSC and upcoming classified presentations - not a traditional master plan - serves as a compass for the institution -launched Ideascale to provide feedback - suggestion: add table of contents - language: will, should, may very intentional and purposeful; every imperative has a "will" - suggestion: clarify the use of the language so intent is clear - question: expanding essential skills imperative - seems to focus on degrees and ignores certificates; intent is actually the opposite - what one thing stood out: the ability of AI in the future to replace human jobs; the ability of technology to expand our reach but yet isolate due to a lack of technology - how do we utilize this document - consider the ability to review annually and update the document
