		Data from the 2019 ARC Institutional Campus Climate Survey can be used to compare data from an ARC Student Campus Climate Survey rolled out in early April 2022. The student survey asked questions about A Checklist for Sustaining Institution-Wide Racial Equity. Please review section 2 of the checklist: "Language." team spirit, are you proud of your college, safety, student success and overall educational experience. Overall findings of data analyzed and presented from the 2019 Institutional Campus Climate Survey confirmed that ARC's employees of color (EOC) were less likely to agree about topics such as "am I satisfied with my job?", "is teaching and learning equitable?" and "is equity, inclusion

(Time-specific: Begins at 1pm) The ARC Student Campus Climate Survey was launched last week. Once the survey closes, ARC's Research Office will begin analyzing the data according to our College's priorities. Yuj and Jen will share what the climate survey is, and we will also discuss how College use the data generated by the climate survey to further our equity priorities and goals. Please see the two PDF attachments on this topic.

and social justice applied fairly?" than their white counterparts. In addition, perceptions of the primary work location that ranked "hostile to friendly," "racist to non-racist," and "competitive to cooperative," were viewed as more hostile, more racist and more competitive by employees of color than white employees. EOC reported more frequent microaggressions. These data align with national data on these topics.

Surveys such as the 2019 ARC Institutional Campus Climate Survey and 2022 ARC Student Campus Climate Survey give powerful snapshots of culture at ARC. Surveys conducted every two years will collect and analyze relevant data to be used to identify patterns and trends, and to meet the goal of becoming a data-informed institution.

Presentations and Executive Summaries created from these data that are clear, digestible and packaged as a shared visual will be starting points for future discussions.

A Checklist for Sustaining Institution-Wide Racial Equity. Please review section 2 of the checklist: "Language." We will continue to discuss how this checklist can help our Council be more equity-minded and effective as we review College policies, processes, and programs. Please come prepared to share questions, observations, and/or a "golden line" from the section.

A Checklist for Sustaining Institution-Wide Racial Equity from the Center of Urban Education is being discussed by section by members. "Language" was the section discussed at this meeting. Comments about deficit-mindedness thinking, how coded language is still used in federal grant titles and programs to describe "at risk" persons, that faculty may not understand why the origin of words matter.

Time for discussion of various important questions raised during the last few meetings related to how we plan and assess our work as a Council: --How can the SSC share it's work more effectively with the rest of the College? Could we provide more ways to get input from those outside the Council? --How do we assess our work and our effectiveness as a Council? Are we meeting the goals outlined in our Charter? --How to we assess the success of our project teams that we "sponsor?" What does it mean to support a project team? --How do the teams know what support is available? --The idea of double loop learning seems important, where you study a situation, make changes to address the root causes of the situation, assess those changes, and make new changes as needed in an ongoing cycle.

Question #1: How can the Student Success Council (SCC) share it's work more effectively with the rest of the College and how would one bring something to the Council? Comments included that the SCC has members who report out to the Academic Senate and the Classified Senate and instructors can partner with research.

Question #2: How do we assess our work and our effectiveness as a Council? Are we meeting the goals outlined in our Charter? This is a more difficult question to answer so a recommendation to outsource this to a consultant and to add an equity lens to the assessment tool used to evaluate the Council.

Question #3: How to we assess the success of our project teams that we "sponsor?" What does it mean to support a project team? Feedback included double loop learning to make systemic changes, review the previous assessment done by the SCC, how do we avoid business as usual and to use IGOR as a repository to name a few.
